

Maths - Last Period on Friday!

I was lucky enough to teach the students on the next three pictures and I really mean that.

This was a time when school finished at 4.00 pm. I took the picture at 3.50 in December. Notice how dark it is outside and the poor lighting in the room.

The student on the left does seem to have a pen in his hand. Actually, I think that it was a lesson about  $\pi$  and we were sticking strips of paper together with Sellotape - notice the roll on the table - to make circles.

Obviously, the students are exhausted having found the value of  $\pi$  from the calculator rather than wasting valuable time with messy paper circles.

On the last two pictures, it is clear that the 'best practice' of students discussing the concepts, skills and knowledge that they have acquired in the lesson is taking place.

The visual displays on the notice boards does leave a lot to the imagination but I think that we were in the process of a spring clean. The poor state of the room does make one appreciate the new building.
